HOPPERS AND FEEDERS

Plenty of Hopper Feeder Space Is Important

The average flock of laying hens and chicks are not given hopper feeding space enough. For hens allow at least 16 feet of feeding space for each 100 birds. You cannot expect high production if the birds have to crowd each other for feed. In chickens, plenty of hopper space is even more important. Many chicks are stunted and starved to death simply because of lack of feeding space. Allow at least 1½ inches of feeding space to each chick. The feeders we sell are all designed so that it is easy for the birds to get the feed but impossible for them to waste it. A well designed feeder will pay for itself in the feed it saves in a month's time.
